ENG207 College English II 3 Credits

The course is divided into five segments: Part One explores active reading, prewriting strategies, developing a thesis, drafting, and revising. Part Two explores key rhetorical modes: description, narration, example, process, comparison and contrast, classification or division, cause and effect, definition, and argumentation. Part Three deals with literary analysis and writing essay exams. Part Four gives considerable attention to the essential research process. Part Five explores effective sentence construction and practical writing advice.

Prerequisite: ENG106 College English I

Note: ENG208 may be taken in place of ENG207
